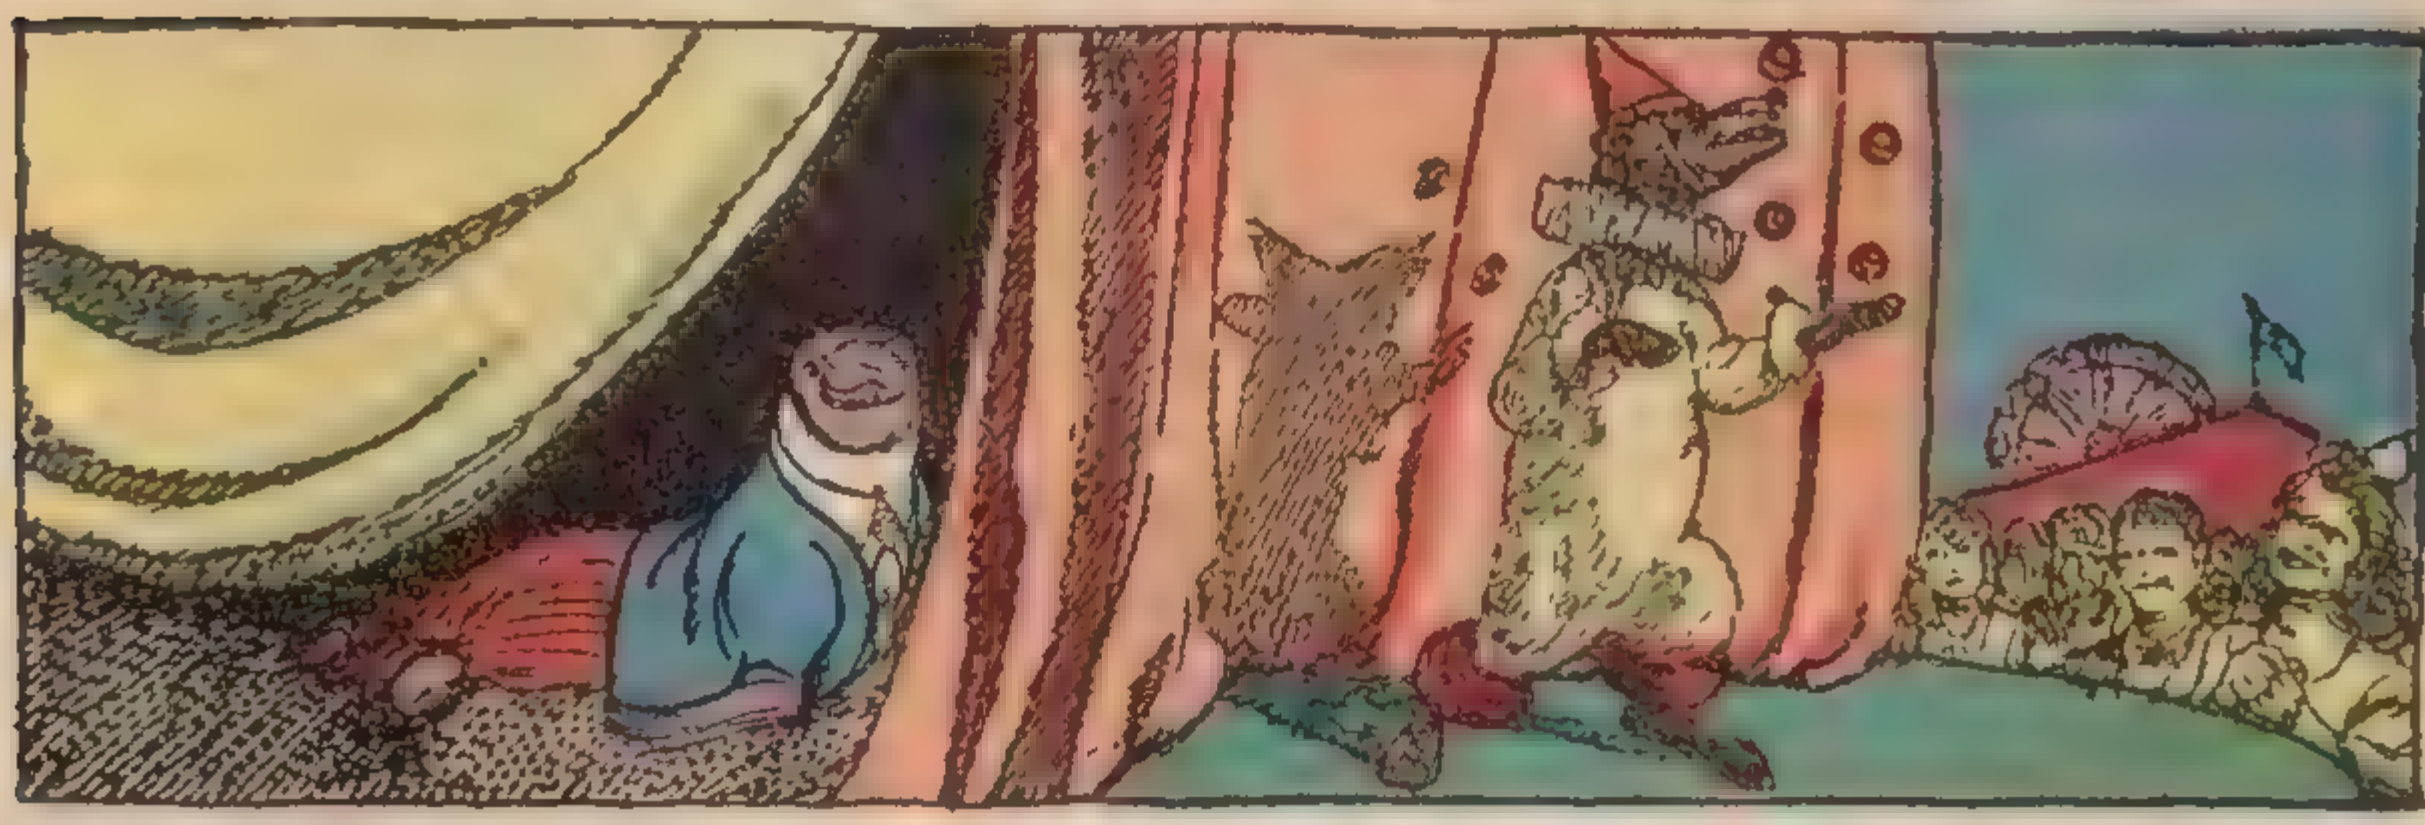
The PUP and the POOCH



"DID I ever tell you the story about the strangest friendship ever known?" asked Professor Oscar Owl.

"No," said Roger Raccoon, Roscoe Rabbit and Sammy Squirrel, in one voice.

"Good," said Prof. Owl, "because it is one of my fanciest Fact and Fancy Stories. The two heroes of the story are both pups. But only one of them ever grew up to be a dog. The other one grew up to be something else.

"You know that the babies of different animals are known by different names. Baby cats and baby skunks are kittens; a baby bear is a cub. A young horse is a colt, a young cow is a calf, a young goat is a kid. And two kinds of baby animals are called pups. A young dog is a pup—and so is a young sea-lion. So much for the facts.

"Both of my friends were born in a circus. The one's first name was Percy, and his last name must have been Pooch, because his father was billed on the circus posters as—The Prattling Pooch. He was a talking dog.

"The other pup's name was Sammy Sea-Lion. His parents were jugglers and musicians. They could only play one piece on the harmonica, but they did that very well. And as jugglers they were the very best.

"First they tried to teach Sammy how to play the harmonica, but had to give that up fast because Sammy had no ear for music. Then they tried to teach him how to balance things, but soon found out he had no nose for juggling. Everybody was discouraged, most of all Sammy, for he loved the circus, and wanted to stay in it all his life.

"Meanwhile, Percy Pooch was having troubles too. His father gave him some alphabet blocks for his first Xmas present, hoping that Percy would learn his A,B,C's. But he never even learned how to spell cat, much less pronounce it. So he just played with the blocks, and got very good at it too, in a different way.

"One day while the big show was on, and all the animals were performing in the rings and on the stages, Sammy Sea-Lion went for a walk through the Midway. He passed a small tent whose flap was open, and glanced in. To his surprise, he saw Percy Pooch with an alphabet block perched on the end of his nose. Sammy went into the tent.

"'My goodness,' he said. 'I wish that I could do that.'

"Now Percy Pooch could talk the animal language all right. He just couldn't learn to talk the way humans do. So he answered Sammy, and said:

"'That's nothing. Watch this.'

He grabbed three blocks in each paw, and juggled all six in the air, while keeping another balanced on the end of his nose.

"'Marvelous,' exclaimed Sammy.

"'What's that sticking out of your pocket?' asked Percy.

"'It's a harmonica. It makes funny noises when you blow on it—I mean when I blow on it,' said Sammy.

"'Let me try it,' said Percy.

Well, inside of ten minutes, Percy, who had heard it played by the band many times, was playing the Stars and Stripes Forever on the harmonica. And at the same time, juggling and balancing the blocks with great skill.

"'Bravo!' applauded Sammy. 'If I could do that I could make somebody a million dollars.'

"'No good to me,' said Percy. 'A dog juggler has got to have a patter to go with his act. He's got to crack jokes and gags and make wise-cracks as he goes along, like a magician. But I can't talk at all.'

"'That's too bad,' said Sammy. 'Now I can talk human talk, but whoever heard of a talking Sea-Lion?'

"'You can talk?' asked Percy, astonished. 'Where did you learn?'

"'From my parents' trainer. I can say the same things he does,' replied Sammy.

"'Let me hear you say something,' said Percy.

"'O.K. — here goes . . . DO THAT OVER! NO—STUPID, NOT THAT WAY! TRY IT AGAIN! THERE—THAT'S BETTER, MUCH BETTER. HERE'S YOUR FISH FOR A REWARD. And I can say lots more,' said Sammy.

"'Wonderful,' said Percy Pooch. 'We must form a team. We'll call ourselves—The Pup and The Pooch.'

"And they did," concluded Professor Owl. "They became the most famous act in circus history."

"How come?" asked Roscoe Rabbit.

"Well, Percy Pooch loaned Sammy (The Pup) Sea-Lion his alphabet blocks to learn more words. And Percy taught himself to play a couple more musical instruments, and became a One Dog Band. Meanwhile Sammy memorized a thousand jokes and gags, learned how to Emcee the act, and keep up a constant chatter, while Percy did his tricks and juggling. But at their first public performance, Sammy got stage fright, which he never did get over. So he had to learn how to be a ventriloquist, and throw his voice.

"He stayed behind the scenes on the stage, while Percy did his act making his mouth go like Charlie McCarthy. The audience thought Percy was doing all the talking.

"It was the greatest double-talk show of all time," finished Professor Oscar Owl.
